

Do You Remember?

Many of the people in this program claim to have been contacted or abducted by creatures from outer space. Initially, their memories of the abduction are vague, but as they discuss them with others, they are often able to provide more details.

Use the questions that follow to help you recall the facts of the disturbance in your class. Then write a story of the experience with your group that you all believe is completely accurate. Include as many details as possible when you tell the story. Then share your story with the rest of the class. Your classmates will ask you questions to help you work out the details.

The Facts:

What time did the incident happen?

How long did the incident last?

	Person 1—Student	Person 2—Adult
Who entered the room first?
Who spoke first?
What clothes was each person wearing?
What type of hat was the adult carrying in his pocket?
Who said what to whom?
Why might the student have been carrying a ball?

Your Group's Story:

What parts of your story are you most confident about? Why? Least confident about? Why?